

Visiting Research Fellows

Crossroads Central Asia is open to host international scholars researching Central Asia as visiting research fellows. CCA offers an institutional affiliation for the fellowship period, an opportunity to publish policy-relevant research, support with networking, and advice on research design and implementation. Applications are accepted on a rolling basis. This is a self-funded position.

Eligibility

- Doctoral or postdoctoral researchers in Politics, International Relations, Foreign Policy, Central Asian Studies, or relevant fields with active research projects on Central Asia. MA students and senior scholars are also welcome to apply.
- Candidates must be able to use English as a working language for publication.

How to apply

Please submit the following documents by email attachment to aijan@crossroads-ca.org.

- CV and a cover letter
- A brief description of the research project
- A proposal for publication on the CCA website

The applications are considered on a rolling basis. The responses will be provided within two weeks of the receipt of the application.

About Crossroads Central Asia

Crossroads Central Asia brings together scholars researching politics, societies and international relations of Central Asia. CCA's work is committed to fostering policy impact through rigorous research and stakeholder engagement. It is an independent regional policy-led research hub offering bespoke analytical services to individuals and organisations. Further information and recent publications can be found at <https://crossroads-ca.org>.